The Trossachs, Craig Angus. Extending westward from Loch Achray to Loch Katrine is one of the famous beauty spots of North Britain. A rugged labyrinth of mounds and rocks covered with the richest vegetation of oak and birch and rowan, among which the road winds in and out, up and down, and at each turn presents a fresh view of the purple crags of Ben A'an or Ben Venue.

I have just been on a visit to Callander which is near the place on the picture. We went for a drive up Loch Katrine. Lovely scenery. Weather fine. Love. Peter.
